PrivacyThe invention concerns a shingle for a shutter for a window, including a substantially flat platelike element having at least one free end facing away from the plate, with the flat plate having a top end portion and a bottom end portion, the end portion having a cutout opening and the flat plate in its platelike base having a top end portion and a bottom end portion, the top end portion having at least a first wing portion and the bottom end portion having at least a second wing portion. Such a shutter is known from DE 33 11 930 C2. The shingle is formed by bending the element at the top end portion so that it is bent about 90° in the longitudinal direction of the element. In contrast, the shutter is bent over the cutout opening.

Since the shingle, with the exception of its free end, is bent in a plane parallel to the top and bottom end portions, it cannot be inserted into the cutout opening in an insertion direction parallel to the top and bottom end portions. A shingle which can be inserted into the cutout opening is known from

DE 32 17 443 A1. According to the last-mentioned document, a shingle is bent by 90xc2x0 and, for the purpose of reducing the width of the cutout, the 570a42141b
