His whole thing is that the earth is getting warmer and he's preaching about the end of the world. It seems to me that it's a bit of a tragedy that people who present this as being incredibly sincere and thoughtful are in fact so clownish. I find myself near tears when I watch talk from the chat boards where scientists talk with their families about what it's like to have depression, discuss how they are weathering the increasingly outlandish and hostile claims of the loony right wing, and then try to find their language and tone fitting to describe the state of the world. People cling to the life raft that is climate change when all around them the water is rising, and the earth is dying for want of warning. So thank you for bringing up Deuteronomy. I have long enjoyed reading that book. Now the question is, does Deuteronomy preach a doomsday global cooling? I cannot recall. I'm not super familiar with Deuteronomy, but its cultural context is important. quote: And even if its about God himself, this is not what a proper reading of Deuteronomy would say. Screw the "it's not"
